

Sathya Silva is a Human Performance Investigator at the National Transportation Safety Board in the Office of Aviation Safety. Within this role, she serves as a human performance group chairman when conducting aviation accident investigations. She graduated in 2016 from MIT with a Ph.D. in Aeronautics and Astronautics and a focus in human factors. She has worked with various aerospace organizations including NASA, Boeing, and the FAA. Sathya is also a pilot and flight instructor and holds over 1200 hours of flight time.